GENERAL HAIG HAS PLANS CARE-FULLY DRAWN TO FUTURE ACTIVITY.

KEEP UP THE ATTACKS

Along a Hundred and Twenty Mile
Front—Some Gains Reported
By the French But Lull
Precedes Big Battle.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
The British front in northern France is again developing signs of renewed activity. Today's official statement from London details a new unusual number of British raids. Operations by raiding forces on this scale are usually the prelude to offensive movements of importance.

General Haig has not struck a hard blow on any extended front since the week of the Messines fighting, when the famous ridge on the Belgian front was captured.

There is a momentary lull in infantry activities on the Aisne front. The French have virtually succeeded in re-establishing in its entirety, their lines in the Vauxion area, dented by the crown prince's forces in a sudden drive on a narrow front last week. Further fighting is in prospect east of this sector, in the connection the artillery activity reported today along various portions of the Chemin-Des-Dames Plateau is significant.

Keep Up Pressure.
British Headquarters in France, June 25.—A British official statement reported little activity, the British are keeping up their pressure day and night along the 120 mile front they occupy. Last night a number of local enterprises were carried out. One of these operations was rather important, increasing as it does the British grip about Lens. Under the light of the stars the British troops fought and captured 400 yards of front line trenches east of Raimont Wood, in the western outskirts of Lens, thus drawing closer to the mining capital of France.

Elsewhere several raids in the dark have served to keep Prussian nerves on edge. One of these was undertaken west of Hillie, where Prussian lines were broken in while during a period of two and one-half hours the British remained in the enemy's trenches.

Heavy casualties were inflicted on the Germans and the dugouts were bombed.

Two more raids were carried out in the region of Roux, where a local push northwest in Yarneton secured two advance posts. In this affair a number of Germans were killed.

British Raids Succeeded.
London, June 25.—Increasing activity on the western front is reported in today's official announcement, which records various successful raids by the British.

Artillery Exchanges.
Paris, June 25.—Sharp artillery fighting was in progress continuously during the night near Froimont farm, says today's official statement.

STORM FREAK SAVES WINONA GIRL'S LIFE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Winona, Minn., June 25.—Isabelle Folstet, 17 years old, had a remarkable escape from death during a severe electrical storm this morning, when lightning struck the bed in which she was sleeping and completely demolished it. Not in time to get out of the room, she was lying on a splintered wooden bed when the lightning struck.

The storm descended upon Winona and vicinity early this morning and for several hours a squall of lightning descended, striking trees, barns and residences in the city. A street car was struck but the one occupant was not injured.

Telephone service was crippled.

LIGHTNING STRIKES HALL AT FOOTVILLE

Chimney is Demolished and Extensive Damage Done—Fire Alarm
Sounded But No Blaze.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Footville, June 25.—During the electric storm this morning lightning struck the Masonic hall, demolishing the chimney and causing extensive damage, which has been covered by insurance. The crash caused a near panic in the village and the whistle of the condenser plant sounded.

alarm of fire. There was no blaze, however, although a squad of volunteer fire fighters was formed. This village is without fire protection since it is not incorporated.

USE MACHINE GUNS TO HALT CORK RIOT

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Cork, June 25.—Machine guns were used on the Sinn Feiners in the disturbances here yesterday morning, after the police with clubs had failed to restore order. One rioter was killed and several wounded. A dozen were treated in hospitals for bayonet and other wounds. The riot was eventually quelled without the troops coming into action.

GALVESTON NEGRO IS HANGED BY MOB

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Galveston, Tex., June 25.—Chester Sawyer, a negro, accused of attacking the wife of a dairy man, was taken from jail here today and hanged at the western boundary of the city. The mob, composed of only a few men, obtained entrance to the jail by a ruse and then overpowered the jailer.

SCORE OF MEASURES PASSED TO PROMOTE THE PUBLIC HEALTH

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Madison, Wis., June 25.—The legislature now in its final stages has enacted a score of measures for the promotion of the public health. The state health authorities are convinced these new laws will assist state and local officials materially in safeguarding the rights and extending the health protection of the public.

These laws include the following: Authorizing towns, villages and cities, contiguous to each other, to employ a full-time health officer, to be paid jointly by such communities. Requiring teachers to send home pupils habitually unclean or infested with vermin.

Requiring the physician or midwife to notify the state board of health of deformities or physical defects in new-born children, such reports to be treated confidentially; and providing for the commitment of such children where necessary.

Making familiarity with the public health laws and regulations of the state board of health a requisite to issuance of a license for a physician, nurse, midwife or other health official, and requiring posting of the list of notifiable, communicable diseases in the physician's office, hospitals and schools.

Providing for the revocation for one year of the license of physicians failing to diagnose cases of dangerous communicable disease where possible through exercise of their skill in bacteriological examination.

Authorizing towns, villages and cities to employ public health nurses, individually or jointly. Authorizing the state board of health to enforce orders under the local and restaurant sanitation law to mean places where meals or lunches are served.

Empowering the state board of health to promulgate rules for the construction and operation of rendering plants, to have the force of law.

Permitting the state health officer to act for the state board of health in the issuing and enforcing of orders in compliance with the state health laws.

Providing that health certificates for marriage must be issued by a physician or nurse of the state where the marriage takes place.

Regulating marriage and marriage licenses and promoting uniformity between states relative to marriage laws.

Requiring the common law marriage but requiring the contracting parties to obtain a license, ceremony not being necessary, and requiring application blanks etc., to be filled out by the parties.

Legitimizing children born out of wedlock where the father and mother later intermarry.

Requiring physicians to report to the state board of health all cases of venereal disease treated by them, and providing for treatment of such persons.

Penalizing the violation of quarantine.

Providing for the apportionment of the cost of surface or storm water sewers.

Authorizing cities or villages to require connection of buildings, used for human habitation, with the public water and sewer system, where the buildings are adjacent to such systems.

Prohibiting the depositing of dead animal carcasses in any stream, lake, or swale, highway or other place, and providing for the rendering or other disposition of carcasses.

Providing that the discharge of sewage waste into a ditch or drain so as to constitute a nuisance shall be prohibited.

CZECHS ARE LEAVING TO JOIN RUSS

THREE REGIMENTS REPORTED TO HAVE DESERTED THE AUSTRIAN ARMY VERY RECENTLY.

CAUSES A SENSATION

Leader of the Czech Union is Still Under Arrest in Vienna and His Countrymen Protest.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Amsterdam, June 25.—Three Czech regiments have deserted to the Russians, according to a statement Saturday to a committee of deputies from southern Austria by F. von Georgi, minister of defense in the retiring Austrian cabinet as published in the Lokal Anzeiger, and Tageblatt of Berlin. The statement was made during a discussion of the demand of Czech deputies for the release of Herr Klotz, who was sentenced to death on the charge of attempting to reconcile Russia and Bohemia.

The sentence of Herr Klotz, a deputy and head of the Czech union, as cancelled by Emperor Charles but he is still held in prison.

Herr von Georgi said Czech legions had been formed in all the armies of Austria's enemies, and that of all the Czech of military age who were in Russia when the war began, only three had returned to Austria.

He also said that Herr Pavlu, formerly director of the Bohemian newspaper Nardoni Listy of Prague had boasted publicly in Russia that an enlistment in the Austrian army had deserted to the Russians after his companion had believed the Russian offer.

Herr von Georgi's statements are said to have made a great sensation. The Czech deputies, angered by them, charged that they had been made in the fact that the military had been forced to resign.

GEORGIANS TO ASK SEPARATE AUTONOMY

Tiflis, Transcaucasia, Sunday, June 24.—A congress of Georgian national democrats, a resolution has been adopted in favor of the autonomy of Georgia.

Georgia is a district of Transcaucasia, Russia, the Georgians forming about half the population, and celebrated for athletic men and beautiful women, number more than 1,000,000, divided into various tribes.

Peasants Plan Vengeance.
Petrograd, June 25.—A dispatch from Nikolayev, northeast of Odessa, relates that the peasants of Novia Odessa, enraged by the crimes of murderous burglars and horse thieves, started an organized movement against them, torturing or killing captured leaders. The authorities of Nikolayev who went to the scene to protest, were threatened, with violence. Twelve charred corpses marked the scene of the peasant vengeance.

SOCIALISTIC PLAN TO AID RUSSIANS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Petrograd, June 25.—The provisional government today decided to solve by radical state socialistic methods, the crisis caused by complete lack of manufactured goods.

The government is making M. Pleschchikov, minister of food and supplies, responsible for furnishing the population with all indispensable industrial products, especially textiles, shoes, soap and kerosene.

A fund, therefore, will be at the minister's disposal by the senate. The ministry will necessary proceed itself to manufacture the foregoing goods the existing provisional organization created by the provisional government, April 7 for distributing food, will also produce and distribute manufactured articles.

CANAL ENGINEER A MAJOR GENERAL

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Waukegan, Wis., June 25.—A district attorney summons, provided by the Wisconsin law to enable public officials to get information from prospective witnesses, will be served today, it is said, on Dr. David Roberts, the veterinarian whose wife was shot and killed last week by Miss Grace Lusk, the school teacher.

The summons will bring him into court for examination by the district attorney. The doctor has already been subpoenaed to appear at the inquest next Wednesday. Attorney General Owen who is taking statements on the local sanitarium, will assist the district attorney while here.

Rumor has it here today that the defense is considering the advisability of ignoring the usual insanity plea and standing on the merits of Miss Lusk's alleged wrong by Dr. Roberts. Miss Lusk was reported as doing well at the hospital. After shooting Mrs. Roberts she fired two bullets into her own breast.

David Roberts whose wife was killed by Miss Grace Lusk, was questioned behind closed doors by District Attorney Tuller, who wanted particularly to learn whether he had heard Miss Lusk make threats against the life of Mrs. Roberts.

This is a new photograph of William L. Sibert who was recently named a major general by President Wilson. General Sibert was associated with Major General Goethals in the construction of the Panama canal, having designed and built the great locks without which there would have been no canal.

General Sibert ultimately had an official fall-out with General Goethals and left the Canal Zone. He has since been a line officer.

British and German Delegates Will Plan Prisoners' Exchange

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
The Hague, June 25.—A British commission headed by Lord Newton has arrived here to discuss with German delegates headed by General Friedrich the question of war prisoners. Prisoners' camps, reprisals and matters connected with exchange of interned prisoners over military age and disabled prisoners will be considered.

BEGIN A DRIVE TO SECURE QUOTAS OF SEVENTY THOUSAND

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Chicago, June 25.—The Central Department of the United States Regular Army today began its week's drive to secure its quota of 70,000 volunteers, called for by the president.

The Military Training Camp Association entered the fray with an appeal pointing out the advantages of joining the regulars. Unmarried men 18 to 25 years of age are wanted. It is pointed out that if they are in the ranks of the regulars that officers are constantly being commissioned.

It is also asserted that $30.00 pay together with 20 per cent additional for actual work on the battlefield is clear, as board, medicine, insurance and even recreation are paid for by the government, and that compared with the pay of soldiers in the field, it will make financial aristocrats of the American soldiers.

SINK U-BOAT AT RANGE OF FIVE MILES

BRITISH MERCHANT VESSEL BAGS
GERMAN SUBMARINE IN RUNNING FIGHT OFF
IRELAND.

BOAT BREAKS IN TWO

Twelfth Shot Hits Submarine Near Perilscape, Causing its Immediate Sinking—American Ships
Torpedoed.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
An Atlantic Port, June 25.—Members of the crew of a British steamer arriving here today reported having sunk an attacking German submarine. The British vessel sent a shell into the U-boat's magazine, causing an explosion which parted the underwater boat about amidships. Each end sank separately. The British steamer was uninjured. The submarine was five miles distant and running away after having attacked the Britisher, nearly 400 miles off the coast of Ireland.

U-Boat's Shell Falls Short.
According to the story told by the gunner of the British steamer, the submarine was first seen when she sent a shell at the steamer from a distance of about 3000 yards. It fell short and the steamer immediately was swung around so that her stern was toward the U-boat, getting the naval gun at work.

Eleven shots were fired in rapid succession and each struck very close to the Germans.

Of new I had the range after the second shot, and so did the Germans," said the British gunner. "The Germans were using their two guns, fore and aft, while we had only one, raised and they started to run. I followed him with shells and the twelfth, the one that sent them down, struck just about the periscope. She was then more than 3,000 yards away."

We could all see the boat break in half and go down. I sent four more shots into the water at the spot where she disappeared to let any of the boat's crew who might have been there know that we were still around and could take care of them if they appeared.

At the same time our battle was going on, the wireless operator picked up the call of (An American vessel that arrived at an Atlantic port last Friday) and also caught a message torpedoed and was sinking. The message said that the German was firing on the lifeboat. That vessel was about thirty miles to the south of us and I do not know how they made out.

The steamer's captain and other officers would not discuss the battle but confirmation of the gunner's story was obtained from other members of the crew.

British Ship Sunk

Montreal, June 25.—The British steamer Orford, 1,145 tons gross, was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine June 14th, and three members of her crew lost their lives, according to survivors of the ship who arrived here today. The ship was on her way from Genoa to Liverpool and was sunk without warning. An American vessel about four miles from the scene came to the rescue and several shots were fired at the submarine.

Milwaukee Ready.
Milwaukee, Wis., June 25.—The Milwaukee Red Cross fund totaled $694,610, or nearly 8 hundred thousand in excess of the city's allotment, up to Saturday afternoon. Reports received from various parts of the state indicate that Wisconsin will contribute about a million toward the fund.

The Food Bill.
Washington, D. C., June 25.—Representative Barkley's amendment to the food control bill which would prohibit the use of food, food material or feeds for the production of alcoholic or non-alcoholic beverages during the war, was adopted Saturday by a vote of 132 to 114.

TOTAL ENROLLMENT OF MEN FOR DRAFT REACHES 9,569,382

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Washington, June 25.—Official war registration returns with one New York county and three Wyoming precincts missing, made public today, show a total enrollment of 9,569,382, or approximately 96 per cent of the census bureau's estimate. The apparent shortage is more than offset by the number of men in the army and navy who were not required to register.

Of the registrants, 1,239,865 are un-naturalized foreigners from countries other than Germany, and 111,823 un-naturalized Germans.

May Release Slackers.
Duluth, Minn., June 25.—Release of 112 prisoners now held at the county jail as slackers is up to the department of justice. At least many are willing to register, and can be released according to the latest order by Provost Marshal Crowder, Washington.

Only six of those arrested in St. Louis county since the drive for slackers was instituted have showed unwillingness to register, was the statement of Justice.

One hundred and twelve have professed ignorance of the registration law.

In a telegram received by Sheriff Manning from Provost Marshal Crowder, it is stated that "those whose failure to register is due to inattention or lack of information or of understanding shall be released as soon as they are registered, and those whose failure to register has been due to disobedience of the law, shall be bound over for trial by federal authorities."

SUNDAY FIRE BOOSTS 6 MONTHS FIRE LOSS TO $100,000 FIGURE

Barn of Andrew Gleaser Damaged Yesterday and Half Year Loss Arrives at Amazing Total.

A suspicious fire of early Sunday morning which did extensive damage to the barn of Andrew Gleaser, 823 Western avenue, at the foot of South Locust street, and in which two work horses were killed, has boosted the loss for the first six months of 1917 to $100,000, the greatest conflagration loss for a similar period in the history of the city, Fire Chief H. C. Klein said this morning.

HOW AN ARMY DIVISION IS ALIGNED IN PRESENT DAY TRENCH FIGHTING

It after American troops take their places in the battle line in France and Belgium trench fighting is to be their lot at first, they will soon learn how essential all arms of the military service are for the proper protection of a sector of territory. A study of the accompanying diagram will give an idea of this.

Everything is subordinate to the infantryman, who leaps forward and advances on the enemy when he hears the whistle of his company commander. He makes it possible for artillery to be moved up, for he digs in, at his new position, which is advanced as far as he can go, and thus the fight goes on. Military men are agreed that these tactics must be followed until the enemy's armies are broken.

What a Division Is.
The infantry of a division is made up of three brigades each of three regiments. American regiments now have 2,015 officers and men when recruited up to war strength. The supporting troops in the division bring up the total number of men in the fighting force to 23,324. A complete division comprises the following supporting units to the infantry brigades:

Two regiments of field artillery, each made up of six batteries; one regiment of heavy field artillery, and under the most recent orders, an additional regiment of siege artillery of the heaviest calibre for certain picked divisions; one regiment of engineers—road and bridge builders and trench makers—a signal corps with its telegraph, telephone and aviation sections; the sanitary corps, quartermaster's corps and the staff departments necessary to assist the major-general commanding in his administrative work. Two additional machine gun companies are attached, by recent orders to the division headquarters and one each to the three brigade headquarters. The division has its field bakery, supply train of wagons, its hospitals and ambulance companies. The signal corps must maintain communication between brigade and division headquarters and run wires to the first line trenches. Commanders of the field armies or army corps see that communications are kept up with division headquarters. Aviators of the division report how shells are falling within the enemy lines and give quick news of any movements to show a contemplated advance or retreat. They must be prepared to fight enemy aviators too, but the work of gaining air superiority will fall mainly upon the aviators attached to corps headquarters.

How the Infantry Moves Up.
The regiment of engineers is kept busy preparing trenches and lines of communication from division headquarters to the fighting units and assisting the infantry in digging new trenches. The cavalry, in trench fighting, is useless unless sent forward to the trenches, where it acts as infantry.

The actual fighting men—the infantrymen—must not be kept in the front line trench until exterminated. Twenty-four hours is as much as commanders expect a man in the fire and first-line cover trenches. They must be constantly alert when on that shift and at the same time be careful of their own artillery, which is stationed in their rear and shoots over their heads. Premature explosions are always expected.

The nearest supporting artillery—excepting the machine gun nests and trench mortars, which are in the first-line trenches—consists of light field pieces in the second-line. These have effective ranges from three to five miles, but cannot be trained upon first-line trenches of the enemy, for the latter are too near their own fire trenches. It is generally used for objects one or two miles distant.

Next, in the third line, trench, is the heavy ordnance. This can shoot seven or eight miles, but is more effective at four. Both classes of batteries are used to make "curtains" to prevent supporting forces reaching the first-line trenches of the enemy. For in rear are the monster siege guns, which can shoot ten, fifteen or nineteen miles. Artillerymen take turns with their batteries resting in cantonments and then working "move up" with a regiment of infantry.

First to the Fourth Line.
The first move, after the regiment is detached to go forward, is to the fourth line. It was in cantonments beyond range of the enemy's greatest guns, and as it proceeds toward the front it needs no shelter.

It goes first to the brigade reserve of these regiments, which are kept in well protected positions. The big guns of the enemy frequently "feel out" the locations of reserve regiments. They are safe, however, from ordinary artillery and from rifle fire, and the anti-aircraft guns keep the aeroplanes away from the batteries and camps.

For three days the regiment is held in brigade reserve. The night following it advances via the "bad roads" that are frequently shelled to the third-line trenches. For twenty-four hours the regiment remains in dug-outs upon this line, ready to repulse any sweep of the enemy that might, by chance, overpower the more advanced trenches.

The next move is the second-line positions. While doing the twenty-four-hour forward to repair wire entanglements and act as patrol in No Man's Land—the latter mark the most dangerous for the soldier in trench warfare.

Then comes the forward move to the cover trenches of the first-line. Communication trenches are dug while this advance is made. For the next twenty-four hours the soldiers spend two hours in the fire trench and four in reserve, under cover. If an attack is made, the two battalions held ever ready in the cover trenches rush forward to the fire trench to halt the drive.

When advances are to be made, the brigade reserve is pushed forward in the night, and after the artillery commanders believe they have battered positions in the rear of the enemy's first-line trench, and that a curtain of shells prevents reinforcements from coming up, the whistle blows and the men leap out of their trenches. Wave on wave, they rush forward. If the infantrymen in the fourth and fifth waves see that the others "went into the blue," as they express it, they must go forward anyway, or suffer the punishment for disobedience of orders.

Orfordville News
Orfordville, June 23.—Rev. O. J. Krue, who has been spending the past three weeks at St. Paul in attendance at the meeting of the three branches of the Norwegian Lutheran churches, returned on Friday evening. He was elected as one of the members of the board of regents of the new organization.

The canvass for Red Cross funds still continues. At three o'clock Saturday afternoon the "thermometer" at the bank used to indicate the amount raised stood at $430.

A carload of drainage tile was unloaded at the local siding on Saturday. It is to be used by farmers near Spring Valley Corners.

On Saturday afternoon the farmers of the vicinity held a meeting at the opera house to consider the practicability of taking stock in a farmers' packing plant located at Rockford. Considerable enthusiasm seemed to prevail.

A WARNING.

Is it going to be necessary to actually wake this nation from its lethargy by some sudden, immense loss of life of American citizens to make them realize that we are at war? When Paul Revere rode out through Lexington and Concord, warning "the Red Coats" were coming, the whole of the "Thirteen Colonies" were stirred to activity. It did not need the battle of Bunker Hill to bring the riflemen from the right bank of the Potomac; it did not need the organization of the Continental army to wake the nation to the fact they were at war.

In 1812 there was no necessity to place a bomb under the chair of President Madison to announce this country was entered into its second conflict with a foreign power. The destruction of Washington and the victory of Perry on Lake Erie and the ships manned by American seamen on the Atlantic, and Jackson's defeat of the invading host at New Orleans all told the story.

When the United States went into the Mexican conflict Texas had long before begged for aid. American blood had been spilled and this war is the least of all that this nation may be proud of. It brought about conquest, truly, but at a sacrifice of honor for the most part. We are not proud of that war as a nation, although we won it.

In 1861 when the stars and stripes were hauled down on Fort Sumpter in Charleston harbor the whole nation rose in arms. There was no need for a Paul Revere. The call of the President for troops was enough. The veterans of this conflict were many. The are with us today. Old men, but still as wise in the arts of war and peace.

In Ninety-eight the Maine was blown up—a most unfortunate circumstance. The youth of the nation flocked to the standards of the various regiments called to the front. The days of camp drill, the life in the tents compels them to speak as "models of Ninety-eight." They were tried, not found wanting, but not needed.

Today we find the youth of this country seeking to evade the draft by establishment in this or that organization that promises something. The regular army recruiting, the recruiting for the various naval activities have not brought the wonderful results. The trouble with the average American youth of military age is that they think they are especially qualified to carry a sword and command men.

Before this war is over the United States is going to wake up to the fact that we are at war. It will not be by a wireless message. Not by a bombardment of our forts, but by a general warping process, and when they do wake they will find that not a few—millions—are going to be needed, and the sooner they are trained the better.

AN HONEST VACATION.

You city people who have friends and relatives in the districts, did you ever realize that you might enjoy a vacation this year and at the same time actually earn your board and do a bit for the country as a whole?

This is the first year that intensive cultivation has been urged upon the average farmer and they have responded nobly. This is the first year that the question of securing labor has confronted them, but it is now more of an evil than ever.

You city people who plan a vacation back to nature—close to old Mother Earth—just think this over. If you toist yourself and your family upon your country cousins or friends who are working them an injury, financially, and the nation as a whole, would like to visit them, would like to help them, and tell your experience in haying, or hoeing, or harvesting, or milking, or anything else of the nature, and ask them if they could use your efforts to an advantage.

Hundreds, yes thousands of men, are needed on the farms. Why not take your team to office work, from toll in a factory or shop or any line of industry by having a change of scene and at the same time be doing your bit in conserving the food supply of the nation.

You will be twice welcome at your country relatives' home if you write your own resume of office work, and you will be willing to work, and your welcome will be time to slip off to the pond or creek for a swim or a bit of fishing. You can play baseball instead of golf in the evening after the milking is done.

Up with the birds, with an appetite that wonders at coffee and rolls and a good, hard day's work in the fields ahead of you, you will be ready for the best of nights, happy and contented. Think this over when you write your friend in the rural district that you plan to visit them. Think it over and act accordingly.

SUMMER FLOODS.

Excessive rains have created flood conditions in many parts of the state that are usually unfortunate at this time of the year. The late spring, the cold and other conditions that seriously injured crop futures are brought to a climax by the flooding of the banks of many small rivers and streams which can not but result in the washing out of crops and ruining much valuable property. It is unfortunate these conditions exist, but we must expect that the element can not be controlled any more than a state legislature or a congressional delegation.

NO HALF WAY.

It took President Wilson a long time to make up his mind to commit the United States to a war with Germany, but once he started he does not intend that there is to be any half way measure in the matter. He intends to fight it out "on this line, if it takes all summer," and he is holding a firm hand on congress, meanwhile writing strong state papers to foreign powers, conferring with foreign delegations and planning for a grand offensive movement. Now he is in the scrap he means to let Germany fully understand that he is in it to win. All hail to the administration.

THE VETO.

Governor Philipp showed great wisdom in vetoing the newspaper pass legislation bill which had passed both houses of the legislature. Such a law would violate the intent and purpose of the anti-pass law and at the same time would practically bring back the average newspaper owner to the terms of bondage to the railroads that he endured in the olden days when passes were free as water. The action of the governor is to be commended.

A dispatch states that "bases" are being arranged for the American army in France. From the habits of our boys it may be asserted that these bases are first, second, third, and home plate.

Our alien residents can't be drafted because they owe allegiance to their home countries, and they can't be drafted by their home countries because they live here. So put them at work.

The three classes that must keep or forfeit for the maintenance of the country, draft or no draft, are munition-makers, agriculturists, and baseball players.

As it is a well known fact that the congressmen never play anything but Old Maid, it is not expected that they can reach an intelligent decision on the playing card question.

The fact that a man swears that those confounded Germans must be licked if it takes our last man, does not prove that he can buy a Liberty bond paying only 3 1/2 per cent.

It is probable that the government will be able to prepare for war even if it isn't cheered by burning up $100,000,000 worth of fireworks July Fourth.

With few of the slackers in jail, a lot of others would suddenly discover that they had fully intended to register but forgot all about it when the day came.

It is amazing what attractive graduating dresses the girls made when their mothers planned them, and cut them out, and did all the sewing.

The Liberty loan received splendid support the nation through. A bill over the needed sum shows the spirit.

The young men rapturously applaud the essays read by the girl graduates, but this does not prove that they understand them.

THE HAIRCUT.

A sturdy lad was he and fair,
In south of gallant life,
Who chanced to seek a barber's chair.And to the barber person there,
Remarked with quite a jaunty air,
"I priches, trim the fuz."The barber clipped with practiced aim,
The barber strove to please,
But when at last the gallant came
To pay the reckoning of same,
He heard the barber man exclaim,
"The price is fifty c's!""T' faith, the cost of shoes and spice
Is raised," the barber said,
"And buns and educated mice
And sealing-wax and glue
And we've had to raise the price
Of trimming of your head!"A sturdy lad was he and hale
And a first class fellow,
Who chanced to seek a barber's chair,
The barber turned a trifle pale,
"Thou loost! forsooth, here is thy kale—
But whistle for a dip!"And what his name or who was he,
Who valiantly could serve
A barber as he ought to be,
He knew not where he was,
He only knew it wasn't me,
"I wouldn't have the nerve"Ready-made Clothes Salesman.
Any man who always look neat and tidy if he had a ready-made clothes salesman to go around with him and to put and pull at his coat.
This always makes a coat fit perfectly.When you get a ready-made suit home you are surprised to see the funny jumps and wrinkles in the amusing thing that it didn't look that way at all when you tried it on at the store. You point this out to your wife and after you have both chuckled over it, the salesman and the salesman about it. It is probably a mean thing to do but any man with a little fun in him can't resist joshing the salesman in a case like this.When you get the coat on in the store the salesman turns out to be a pretty good fellow and takes to be in the right spirit. He admits you've certainly put one over on him if you can prove the coat doesn't fit any way and then he leads you to a glass.What's wrong with that fit there? he says. Then quick as a wink he makes a pass or two at the collar and yanks the labels a bit and after a few snappy jerks at the bottom in front he snips your arms to your sides and turns you around so you can see how swell it fits in back.
That's funny! The coat fits perfectly!When you get the coat home and put it on once more it begins to act up again but what's the difference?
Maybe the salesman knows something he doesn't tell you. He knows more about how a coat should be worn.
But it would be fine if he always could be handy to pat and pull at your coat that you could always be looking neat.NUT.

Discontent with his contentment.Entire Russian Nation Voting Today
On Questions Both Meager And meager

(NOTE)—This is the second installment of a graphic picture story of conditions in Russia today, just received by mail from the Petrograd correspondent in Petrograd. The first installment was published Saturday. The third will be printed tomorrow.)

Petrograd, May 25.—Every theory, every belief, every schism of sociology, every injustice, every problem of poverty and of affluence and of labor is being voted on in Russia today.

Meetings by the thousands are being held. The Russian people are dividing themselves along the lines of economic and social problems and their meetings the smallest problems are brought up. In a meeting of washwomen in Petrograd the other day, for instance, the women went so far as to discuss their social standing.

"We want an eight hour day," declared one washwoman. "We want to have time every day, to visit our friends and to enjoy life."

"No! No!" declared the next speaker. "What we want is more work. I want to get all the work I can do and work as long as I please. I have no friends but only my work."

That woman is wrong," declared a third. "If we haven't got any friends to visit, it's because we've never had time to make friends with other people. What we need is more friends and more time to enjoy them."

Utter and absolute free speech exists, only this could make possible the intensity of the meetings and the fact that they are being discussed by the people of seething Russia. Folks are free to talk against each other. Only yesterday, for instance, the soldiers of the czar were not being guarded with sufficient care in his palace. They passed a resolution to that effect and the resolution reached Minister of War.

say he is ill and the doctor, to please us, will leave some little white pills for him to take. Then while he is not looking, the will open a black bag and exchange the box of little pills for a box marked poison. When the doctor finds it out he will think it is a mistake, he will rush back, but by that time the poison will have killed little Bomski and we will sue the doctor for a million roubles damages."

Woogo Allom's face lighted up through his whiskers as he uttered the words. "Will it not be rather rough on little Bomski?" he said.

"I never thought of that," whispered Yumski. And again the couple fell silent with their heads bowed on their arms, while little Bomski slept innocently on his bed of straw in the corner.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Ann Pennington's next Famous Players-Lasky picture, "The Little Boy Scout," will show the little "Follies" star in a new environment. Instead of being surrounded by the chorus girls, she will appear on the screen flanked by a detachment of United States regulars, who recently returned from the Mexican border and are now stationed at Fort Totten, New York.

SHE DROPS INTO MOVIES
Elsie Alder has literally fallen into the movies. Miss Alder is the prima donna of "Miss Springtime" and has recently been visiting on the Pacific coast. While at the Douglas Fairbanks studios at Hollywood watching a stunt picture being taken she accidentally became involved in one of the feats of bravado. Fairbanks was obliged to snatch her out of the way of a horse and jump with her into a motor car in order to avoid an accident.

The camera was working at the time and the incident is to be incorporated in the film.

NANCE TO BE CZAR'S WIFE IN DRAMA

Herbert Brenon has engaged Nance O'Neil for the role of the Czarina, Conway Tearle to impersonate the young Prince, and Exeterina Galtana for the part of Anna, the young girl who is said to have played an important role in the killing of Rasputin, for the photodrama, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," which he is staging in his Hudson Heights studio. Miss O'Neil will enact the part of the strange story he is said to have taken in real life. He was a fugitive in this country for some months preceding the revolution.

BILLIE COMING IN NEW FILM

Billie Burke has finished acting for her first Famous Players-Lasky picture, "The Mysterious Miss Perry," based on a scenario by Gelett Burgess. After a short rest she will begin posing for a screen version of "The Land of Promise," W. Somerset Maugham's drama in which she was seen several seasons ago.

It is rumored by an enthusiastic fan, that Essie's chieftain, Mary McAlister, has a wardrobe containing 100 frocks, forty-five bonnets, nearly a hundred pairs of shoes and slippers.

EDGERTON NEARS THE $5,000 MARK

Edgerton, June 25.—The American Red Cross relief fund has passed the $4,800 mark in the city, and the $5,000 mark is an assured fact. Several contributions were received this morning from people who had been missed by the committees. The committee has been mailing out receipts for the money received. They have run out of receipts, and the balance of them will be mailed out as soon as they are received from headquarters.

The Real Adventure

A NOVEL

By Henry Kitchell Webster

"I am under the impression," he said, "that husbands and wives can talk exactly as well as any other two people. Exactly as well, and no better. The necessary conditions for real conversation are a real interest in and knowledge of a common subject; ability on the part of both to contribute something toward that subject. Well, if a husband and wife can meet those terms, they can talk. But the Joker is, as our legislative friend over there would say, 'he nodded down the table toward a young millionaire of altruistic principles, who had got elected to the state assembly'—'the Joker is that a man and a woman who aren't married, and who are moderately attracted to each other, can talk, or seem to talk, without meeting those conditions.'"

"Seem to talk?" she questioned. "Seem to exchange ideas mutually. They think they do, but they don't. It's pure illusion, that's the answer."

"I'm not clever, really," said Rose, "and I don't know much, and I simply don't understand. Will you explain it in short words?" she smiled. "Since we're not married, you know?"

He grinned back at her. "All right," he said, "since we're not married, I will. We'll take a hypothetical case. We'll take Darby and Joan. They encounter each other somewhere, and something about them that men have written volumes about and never explained yet, sets up. They arrest each other's attention—get to thinking about each other, are strongly drawn to each other."

"It's not quite the oldest and most primitive thing in the world, but nearly. Only, Darby and Joan aren't primitive people. Each of them is carrying a perfectly enormous superstructure of ideas and inhibitions, emotional refinements, and capacities, and the attraction is so disguised that they don't recognize it."

"Absence of common knowledge and common interests only makes Darby and Joan full victims to the very dangerous illusion that they're intellectual companions. They think they're having wonderful talks, when all they are doing is making love."

"And poor Joan," said Rose, after a palpable silence, but evenly enough, "who has thought all along that she was attracting a man by her intelligence and her understanding, and all that, wakes up to find that she's been married for her long eyelashes, and her nice voice—and her pretty ankles. That's a little hard on her, don't you think, if she's been taking herself seriously?"

"Nine times in ten," he said, "she's fooling herself. She's taken her own ankles much more seriously than she has her mind. She's capable of real sacrifices for them. Intelligence she regards as a gift. She thinks witty conversation, or bright letters to a friend, are real exercises of her mind—real work. But work isn't done like that. Work's overcoming something that resists; and there's strain in it, and pain and discouragement."

In her cheeks the red flared up brighter. She smiled again—not her own smile—one, at any rate, that was new to her. "You don't solve an intellectual problem, then," she quoted, "by having your hand held, or your eyes kissed?"

Whereupon he shot a look at her and observed that evidently he wasn't as much of a pioneer as he thought. She did not rise to this, but, however, "All right," she said, "admitting that her ankles are serious and her mind isn't, what is Joan going to do about it?"

"It's easier to say what she's not to do," he decided, after hesitating a moment. "Her fatal mistake will be to despise her ankles without disciplining her mind. If she will take either one of them seriously, or both for that matter—it's possible—she'll do very well."

He could, no doubt, have continued upon the theme indefinitely, but the table turned the other way just then and Rose took up an alleged conversation with the man at her right which included such topics as indoor golf, woman's suffrage, the new dances, Bernard Shaw, Campanini, and the political parties; and with a perfectly appropriate and final comment upon each.

Rose didn't care. She was having a wonderful time—a new kind of wonderful time. No longer gazing, big-eyed like Little Cinderella, at a peasant some fairy godmother's whim had admitted her to, but consciously gazed upon; she was the show, tonight, and she knew it. Her low, finely modulated voice, so rich in humor, so varied in color, had tonight an edge upon it that carried it beyond those she was immediately speaking to, and drew looks that found it hard to get away again. For the first time in her life, with full self-consciousness, she was producing effects, thrilling with the exercise of a power as obedient to her will as electricity to the manipulator of a switchboard.

She was like a person driving an airplane, able to move in all three dimensions. Pretty soon, of course, she'd have to come back to earth, where certain monstrously terrifying questions were waiting for her.

CHAPTER VIII.

Rodney smiled.

The next day, Rose took two steps toward making herself her husband's intellectual companion.

From a university catalog she picked out the names of half a dozen elementary textbooks on law, and then went to a bookstore and bought them. She had taken her determination during the endless waiting hours of the night: she was going to study law—study it with all her might!

The other step was to go and hear Rodney's argument in court that day. She was successful in slipping into the rear of the courtroom—up on the eighth floor of the Federal building—without attracting her husband's at-—the one she knew about.

She discovered in the newspaper, one day, a column summary of court decisions that had been handed down; and though The Case wasn't in it, she kept, from that day forward, a careful watch, discovered where the legal news was printed, and never overlooked a paragraph. And at last she found it—just the bare statement: "Judgment affirmed." Rodney, she knew, had represented the appellant. He was beaten.

For a moment the thing had bruised her like a blow. And then, all at once, in the indrawing of a single breath, she saw it differently. She saw she couldn't help him out of his intellectual quandaries—yet. But under the discouragement and lassitude of defeat, couldn't she help him? She remembered how many times she had gone to him for help like that, and, most notably, during the three or four days of an acute illness of her mother's, when she had been brought face to face with the monstrous, incredible possibility of losing her, how she had clung to him, how his tenderness had soothed and quieted her.

He had never come to her like that. She knew now it was a thing she had unconsciously longed for. And tonight she'd have a chance! There was a mounting excitement in her, as the hours passed—a thrilling suspense.

For two hours that afternoon, she listened for his latchkey, and when at last she heard it, she stole down the stairs. He didn't shoot her name from the hall, as he often did. He didn't hear her coming, and she got a look at his face as he stood at the table absently turning over some mail that lay there. He looked tired, she thought.

attention; and for two hours and a half she listened, with mingled feelings, to his argument. There was no use pretending that she could follow her husband's reasoning. Listening to it had something the same effect upon her as watching some enormous, complicated, smooth-running mass of machinery. She was conscious of the power of it, though ignorant of what it made it go, and of what it was accomplishing.

The three stolid figures behind the high mahogany bench seemed to be following it attentively, though they irritated her bitterly, sometimes, by indulging in whispered conversations. And, presently, he just stopped talking and began stacking up his notes. The oldest judge mumbled something, everybody stood up, and the three stiff, formidable figures filed out by a side door. It was all over.

But nothing had happened!

Rose had expected to leave the courtroom in the blissful knowledge of Rodney's victory or the acceptance of his defeat. In her surprise over the failure of this climax to materialize, she almost neglected to make her escape before he discovered her there.

One practical advantage she had gained out of what was, on the whole, a rather unsatisfactory afternoon. When she had gone home and changed into the sort of frock she thought he'd like and come down-stairs in answer to his shouted greeting from the lower hall, she didn't say, as otherwise she would have done, "How did it come out today?"

In the light of her newly acquired knowledge she could see how a question of that sort would irritate him. Instead of that, she said, "You dear old boy, how dog-fired you must be! How do you think it went? Do you think you impressed them? I bet you did!"

And, not having been rubbed the wrong way by foolish questions, he held her off with both hands for a moment, then hugged her up and told her she was a trump. "I had a sort of uneasy feeling," he confessed, "that after last night—the way I threw you out of my office, fairly, I'd find you tragic. I might have known I could count on you. Is there anywhere we have got to go? Or can we just stay home?"

He didn't want to flounder through an emotional morass. And the assumption that she couldn't walk beside him on the main path of his life was just and sensible. But it wasn't good enough for Rose.

So the very next morning she stripped the cover off the first of the law-books she had bought, and really went to work. She hit down, angrily, the yawns that blinded her eyes with tears; she made desperate efforts to flog her mind into grappling with the endless succession of meaningless pages spread out before her, to find a germ of meaning somewhere in it that would bring the dead verbiage to life. She was very secretive about it; developed an almost morbid fear that Rodney would discover what she was doing and laugh his big laugh at her. She resisted innumerable questions, she wanted to pre-empt him, from a fear that they'd betray her secret.

She even forbore to ask him about the case; it was The Case in her mind.

—the one she knew about.

She discovered in the newspaper, one day, a column summary of court decisions that had been handed down; and though The Case wasn't in it, she kept, from that day forward, a careful watch, discovered where the legal news was printed, and never overlooked a paragraph. ## Dinner Stories

The big increase in the price of beer was milk and honey to the teetotal crank, and he was gloating over the discovery of his friend who liked a drop.

"But it is all for your own good," he impressed upon him. "No more morning headaches, no more shaky hands. I can't afford to spill any at that price!"

A Quaker missionary, recently returned from China, tells this story against himself. As he sat quietly reading in a bus he entered an inspector, obviously short-tempered, gruffly demanding "Tickets!" He came to the Quaker and snapped out his message. "Oh! you want tickets? Yes, didn't I say so?" thrusting his hand into his pocket, the obliging passenger produced a handful of accumulated cardboard. "What's the good of this ticket? You don't suppose I can claim a free admission to a lunatic asylum?"

Properly, of course, this little tale should end there, with a repentant inspector and the high against him. In fact, the official thrust the bundle back into the Quaker's hand, with the remark, "No, no, sir; I won't rob you of your chance!"

"Father, what kind of boats were the rams they used so much in the civil war?"

"They were probably the ancestors of the ewe-boats of today, my boy."
